Note: Cypress Cove has recently been featured in several major media outlets, including The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, The Daily Telegraph, TMZ.com, Inquirer.net, and France24.com, showing that the $7.4 billion au natural travel industry in Florida is a hot topic among media and adventurous travelers.

Ever considered a clothing-optional getaway? Now might be the best time.

KISSIMMEE, FL, August 11, 2020 – While closely following Florida Governor Ron Desantis’s “Safe. Smart. Step-By-Step.” plan, Cypress Cove Nudist Resort has been welcoming visitors again and has been rewarded with growing interest from first-time, au natural vacationers.

“If you have ever thought about visiting a nudist resort,” says Cypress Cove general manager Peter Sewall, “now is the best time for your first experience. Florida tourism’s slow comeback means smaller crowds. If you’ve been shy about testing the waters around a lot of other people, visiting now will give you plenty of space to acclimate until you feel like being social.”

According to Sewall, relaxation and a laid-back atmosphere have always been part of Cypress Cove’s ambiance. With a smaller number of visitors during Florida’s slow and steady re-opening, the environment is perfect for those who want a quiet getaway, privacy, and personal space. The resort’s big, summer events and weekly entertainment have had to be postponed by necessity, but there is still plenty to do on the property and the resort staff have been dedicated to maintaining a safe and healthy environment.

“We have re-opened many of the facilities and amenities here at Cypress Cove Nudist Resort in a way that mirrors the governor’s intentions – both cautiously and guardedly,” Sewall says. “We have taken the pandemic very seriously, and we've implemented all the necessary protective protocols. Our main priority has been to ensure the safety and well-being of our guests, residents, and workers. We expect everyone on property to adhere to current government recommendations for social distancing and other safety precautions while they get rid of their tan lines."
